BONN Oct. 25 (Reuters). -Chancellor Helmut Schmidt faces his first major test of public sentiment on Sunday when onequarter of the nation's voters go to the polls in two state elections.

The II million voters electing new parliaments in Bavaria and Hesse are expected to provide an indication of the standing of Mr Schmidt and his caninet since he took over from Willy Brandt in May following the Guillaume espionage affair.

The two elections also involve nine seats in the 41-seat Bundesrat (upper house), which is made up of parliamentarians from the Federal Republic's 10 states.

At present, the conservative Christian Democratic Union (CDU) and its Bayarian wing, the Christian Social Union (CSU) control the Bundearat by a single seat. This enables them to block or delay bills pushed through the Bundestag (lower house) by the left-liberal coalition.

The Bavarian parliament is controlled by CSU members, allowing them to occupy the state's five Bundesrat seats in Bonn.

Hesse, with its smaller population is entitled to four seats in the upper house and they are occupied by Mr. Schmidt's Social Democratic party. This has been the case in the heavily industrialized state since World War II, giving it the nickname of "Red Hesse." Opinion polls favor the Social Democrats to hold onprobably with the help of their junior coalition partners, the F-se Democrats

Brezhnev Confer on Arms Curb

Kissinger,

By Bernard Gwertzman

MOSCOW, Oct. 25 (NYT).— Secretary of State Henry Kis-singer and Leonid Brezhnev, the Soviet Communist party leader, met for more than five hours today and talked almost exclusively about the key problem of putting further curbs on each side's arsenal of offensive strategic weapons,

A brief communiqué issued at the close of tonight's session said that both leaders regarded the exchange of views as "useful" and would continue discussions tonorrow, Mr. Kissinger's final day in the Soviet capital. He leaves for New Delhi early Sunday morning, on the second leg of his three-week trip to more than a dozen countries. Officials of both countries de-lined to go into details about today's discussions, which lasted two hours and 45 minutes in the morning and 2 1/2 hours tonight, The officials limited themselves to saying that Mr. Kissinger, Mr. Brezhnev and their aides "gave detailed consideration to matters related to possible further measures on the further Hmitation of strategic arms."

A U.S. spokesman said that the atmosphere was "very friend-ly and very cordial," in keeping with the tone of yesterday's first day of talks, which were devoted primarily to issues other than strategic arms limitation.

Little Light Shed

The noncommittal nature of the joint statement shed little light on whether Mr. Kissinger had made much progress with the "fairly concrete ideas" he had brought with him from Washington on how to step up the pace of the Strategic Arms Limitation

Mr. Kissinger's ideas are more specific than general guidelines but not specific enough to be called formal proposals, American officials have said. The purpose of the American plan, approved at a National Security Council meeting in Washington before Mr. Kissinger departed, was to develop a common approach with But politically, Bavaria differs the Soviet Union on which areas in the strategic-arms field to focus attention in coming months. nounced that he would begin a new round of consultations with parliamentary leaders Monday. Political sources said that Mr. Leone may be forced to ask the Christian Democrats to form a minority government. If that were not possible, he would call elections, they predicted.

Another possibility open to Mr. Leone would be to name a new premier-designate to try to form a center-right government with-out the Socialists, the sources said.

The government of Mariano Rumor resigned Oct. 3 after bit-ter feuding by coalition partners on how to face the severe economic crisis. Mr. Leone named Mr. Fanfani Oct. 14 to try to patch up the old center-left formula.

Mr. Fanfanl first met individually with the party leaders and then carried out a letter-writing campaign to get the feuding Social Democrats and Socialists back together.

Verbal Sniping

However, the two parties kept up verbal sniping throughout Mr. Fanfani's consultations and a last-ditch effort yesterday failed to get them to join in what would have been Italy's 37th govern-ment since the fall of Fascism. Politicians said that Mr. Fanfani's failure brought an end to the center-left coalition formula which Mr. Fanfani himself created in 1962 and which has ruled Italy almost continually since.

The Social Democrats met earlier today and sent a letter to Mr. Fanfani in which they again insisted that the Socialists stop their flirtation with the Communists in city and regional governments.

The current crisis broke out when the Social Democrats accused the Socialists of trying to ease the Communists into the government when the Socialists demanded that labor unions be consulted on any action strengthen the economy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (WP). -Scheduled airlines flying the North Atlantic have unexpectedly balked at putting into effect an average 10-per-cent fare increase on Nov. 1. although they procesed the higher fares in the first

The airlines feared that, if they implement the increases approved this week by the Civil Aeronautics Board, they would give too great an advantage to the charter carriers with which they compete.

The airlines said that the new minimum charter rates as compared with the new scheduled rates are too low.

The reports from the scheduled airlines, meeting in Geneva in an executive session of the International Air Transport Association occurred as the CAB urged record was 55,000 pounds.

Many: passengers adready have bought tickets for flights after Oct. 31 at the higher fares. If the increases do not go into effect, the difference will have to be refunded.

The increases range from 3.6 per cent to 19 per cent, depending on the fare.

Sources close to the IATA negotiations believed that the most likely outcome would be for the scheduled airlines to go ahead with the increases, let them run through the winter when charter competition is not significant. and negotiate new fares before next April when the European travel season begins.

But other choices under consideration by the IATA, the scheduled airlines' rate-fixing organization, included; them to put the increases into effect quickly in order to prevent fect for the winter.

• Keeping current fares in effect each should be $45 in the winter and $80 in the summer.

· Modifying the scheduled fares before Nov. 1 to make them more competitive with the charter Informing governments there is no fare agreement. Differential Figure

The last would be the most extreme choice and would lead to a so-called "open-rate" situation. Each airline would be free to set its own fares, subject to approval of governments. Some said this could produce a rate war with the airlines competing in ticket prices. Others said the scheduled airlines would tend to keep fares where they were.

The airlines had been negotiating under the assumption that the round-trip differential between the lowest available scheduled fare and the lowest charter

The CAB issued charter rate guidelines which took into account not only seasonal factors but also the size of an airplane. Under the guidelines, the charter fare difference on a plane with more than 230 seats (the kind most frequently flown by charter airlines) would be $140 less than the lowest comparable scheduled fare. IATA members said that this would make them noncompetitive.

Madrid Announces Measures To Cut Energy Consumption

MADRID, Oct. 25 (UPI).-The Spanish government today announced a list of energy-conserving measures ranging from cuts in the supply of fuel oil to an early close of television broadcasts and public spectacles.

The restrictions are part of emergency measures aimed at eeping the economy going and Spain's balance of payments stable in the face of what the government called an "economic crisis of a universally recognized seriousness" which is affecting Spain as much as the rest of the world. The vice-premier and Imance minister, Antonio Barrera de Irimo, announced the program at a news conference. He said the government had three basic arms

• To assure the level of employment, taking all possible measures to avoid unemployment's rising to more than 2 per cent of the labor force of 132 million. · To reduce substantially the inflation spiral to four percentage points less than this year's rate (estimated at 16 per cent), without letting economic growth

DOITS. To Cut Oil Bill

Mr. Barrera de Irimo said the fourfold increase in the cost of oil was the heaviest strain on Spain's balance of payments. He said the government was taking the following measures to reduce Spain's oil bill:

 Industries will obtain fuel oil at current prices for 90 per cent of their 1973 consumption and pay a surcharge for any oil used above that quota.

• The use of heating oil will be restricted to 80 per cent of the previous year.

· Electric power plants will be restricted to six million tons of fuel oil for the next 12 months. · Spanish airlines have to cancel all flights with low occupan · Room temperatures in public buildings must be kept to 68 degrees Farenheit (20 C)

 Street and public lighting will be drastically reduced. • Television stations have to stop broadcasting at 11:30 p.m. and public entertainment at midnight, except on holidays.

But Mr. Barrera de Irimo suc that there would be no gasoline rationing because consumption dropped after the price was raised to 20 pesetas ($.33) per liter earlier this year.

He said that the government would make available credits to create new jobs and would invest heavily in public housing to overcome a crisis in the construction industry. He said credits will also be made available to stimulate exports and keep the prices of cssential foods down.

Callaghan Questions Benefit Of British-S. Africa Navy Pact

CARDIFF. Wales, Oct. 25 (Reu-ters).—British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said tonight that a naval defense pact with South Africa should be allowed to lapse if the political embarrassment to Britain outweighs the military value.

In a speech here, he accused the Pretoria government of manipulating and misrepresenting a just-concluded visit by 11 British Navy warships to Cape Town in order to try to indicate British support for the segregationist republic while it is under attack at the United Nations.

Mr. Callaghan said that the Labor government, returned to power earlier this month, would "Icok again at the value of the Simonstown agreement."

If it is important to British security to maintain the pact, then it must be continued, he said, adding that the political embarrassment it causes Britain throughout the world must also be weighed by ministers.

A Question of Equality

If there is no equality be-tween the political damage and military usefulness of the pact, then it should be brought to end or allowed to wither on the vine, Mr. Callaghan said. The foreign secretary also an-nounced that Britain would not support the current move to expel South Africa from the UN, although he said this did not lessen British opposition to the apartheid policies of the Pretoria govern-

Britain believes all nations should be represented at the UN whatever their policies, and it opposes the idea of expelling any nation because its policies are detestable or unpalatable, he said.

'Arab Aides Rebuff King On West Bank

(Continued from Page 1) undercut his political opposition today, saying its efforts to force Israeli retention of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan would, if successful, end all prospects for Middle East peace and plunge the region into war.

In a national television interview, Mr. Rabin said he was confident that the move by the Likud opposition bloc would fail before the issue of the West Bank comes up as a formal resolution in the Knesset (parliament).

The Likud has been circulating a petition calling on the Knesset to take action to insure that the West Bank be kept under Israeli rule. Likud leaders say they have collected more than 300,000 signatures on the

Mr. Rabin said the petition had "grave significance" because "it will result in the world condemning us and saying, The State of Israel is closing down the way to peace." In a speech at the northern coastal city of Haifa, Maj. Gen. Ariel Sharon, retired, a leader of the Likud bloc, said he was skeptical of the Arabs' intentions to make peace with Israel and for this reason Israel should not give up any part of the West Bank or the Golan Heights on the Syrian frontier.

Gen. Sharon, commander of the Israeli armored force that crossed the Suez Canal into Egypt in last year's war, said Israel could make further territorial concessions to the Egyptians in the Sinai Desert, but that even there the Jewish state had to keep the oil fields at Abu Rhodels, and Sharm el-Shelkh, at the strategic southern tip of the peninsula.

U.K. Government Will Pay for Thalidomide Tax

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).—The government announced today that it will pay the equivalent of £5 million ($12 million) to a trust fund for thalidomide children to offset taxes on payments from the fund.

The government decision was aimed at defusing a nationwide furor that ensued after families of the deformed children learned that they would be taxed on payments from the fund, set up in 1973 by the Distillers Co.

The giant whisky and chemical manufacturer, which marketed the drug in Britain, agreed to pay the parents of 433 British thalidomide children annual compensation totaling about £2 million for seven years. The government has agreed to pay the taxes because it was not possible to change the tax laws, a treasury official explained. The children's mothers while pregnant, had taken thalicomide. a tranquilizer which was later found to have crippling effects

Shreveport, La., Is Reported Most Segregated City in U.S.

NEW YORK, Ort. 25 (AP)... Shreveport, La. was the most segregated of 109 American cities surveyed by the nonprofit Council on Municipal Perforpronounced in the South and least so in California and university towns, the council said in a report yesterday.

East Orange and Camden,
N.J., were listed among the least segregated cities, but Newark, N.J. was among those showing a strong increase in segregation during the 1960s. The council said its ratings were derived from the 1970 census. The tabulations were prepared under the direction of Prof. Karl Tacuber of the University of Wisconsin, With respect to blacks. Indiana and Asians, the council said 97.4 per cent of the nonwhites in Shreveport would have to change their places of residence to make that city's housing pattern random with respect to race. The next most segregated were Winston-Salem, N. C.; Augusta, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Charlotte, N.C., and Dallas, it said.

Least Segregated

By comparison, in Cambridge, Mass., a university town, 52.6 per cent of nonwhites would have to move to make a random distribution. Following Cambridge on the list of least segregated cities were San Francisco and Sacramento, Calif.; East Orange, N.J., and Berkeley, Calif.

The council defined "random distribution" as providing the same percentage of nonwhites in life and services.

each block of a city as there were nonwhites in the city as a whole. Thus, if a city had a nonwhite population of 30 per cent, under random distribution 30 per cent of the residents of each block in that city would be nonwhites.

Surveying blacks alone, 97.8 per cent of Shreveport's blacks would have to move within the city to achieve random distri-bution. Next highest black segregation was in Dallas, followed by Oklahoma City, Fort Worth, Texas, and Winston-Salem, the council said.

By comparison, to achieve ran-dom distribution in East Orange would require that 61.4 per cent of its blacks move. Next best in this category were Cambridge, Camden, Oakland, Calif., and Wilmington, Del., the council

The greatest trend toward desegregation in the decade of the 1960s was found in East St. Louis, Ill, where segregation declined 15.2 per cent, the council said. Following East St. Louis in the percentages were San Francisco. Cambridge, Flint, Mich., and Minneapolis. Cities that showed an increase in segregation during the decade were Charleston, S.C., up 7 per cent, followed by Macon, Ga., Mount Vernon, N.Y.; Detroit and Newark.

4,000 Spanish Doctors Win Strike Against Loyalty Oath

By Henry Giniger MADRID, Oct. 25 (NYT).-Medical services in public hospitals and climics returned to normal today after the govern-ment yielded to 4,000 striking doctors and dropped its requirement that they have a "good con-duct" certificate.

The certificate, delivered by the police, in effect amounted to an attestation of political acceptability. The successful rebellion against it was another sign of the mounting pressure to loosen the tight reins held by the pres-ent political system over Spanish society.

Members of other liberal professions came to the doctors' support. In general persons working for the government are required to pledge loyalty to the constitution. In addition, a certificate has been required if there is on official record some political activity considered objectionable. Mr. Nixon had been taking the Coumadin pills to thin his blood since his discharge Oct. 4 after a 12-day stay at the hospital. Dr. Lungren also cited the fact that a venogram test had shown "that the deep femoral vein in the left leg is almost totally obstructed" and revealed "the pres-ence of new or old clots in the deep venous system of the left thigh."

Danger of Death WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (WP). -A patient like Mr. Nixon, whose persistent blood clotting has not been stopped, is in danger of death if the clotting is not rapidly halted, one of the country's leading surgeons said yesterday.

Dr. Richard Varco, a professor at the University of Minnesota Medical School, said in an interview: "I do not know anything about Mr. Nixon. But in any such patient, the fact that the condition has been progressive despite treatment has ominous overtones. "One threat is permanent disability. A substantially greater one is that a piece of a clot will come off again and go to the

That happened to Mr. Nixon in September, when Dr. Lungren called it dangerous but "not critical at this time." That clot caused no trouble, but the risk, Dr. Lungren added then, "is the breaking off of another clot, a larger clot which would cause more damage to the lung and a real danger at that time."

Dr. Varco agreed. Any more clots that go to the lungs could cause "real problems," including the possibility of death, he said. If such danger is to be averted, he added, the clotting must be dealt with" by medication or surgery, for "the progression of the disease is unlikely to halt spontaneously. It's likely to move ahead and cause more and more

Dean Accused of False Testimony

-The lawyer for Watergate cover-up trial defendant Robert. Mardian accused John Dean 3d today of fabricating some of his testimony about the early days following the June, 1972, break-in.

During his eighth and final day on the stand; the prosecution's star witness was questioned by David Bress, a former U.S. attorney for the District of Co-lumbia. Dean's detailed narrative of the nine months of the coverup remained unshaken under cross-examination by Mr. Bress and lawyers for the other defen-

Next on the witness list was convicted Watergate conspirator Howard Hunt, whom the prosecutors have asked to be classified as a court witness. They said that while they need Hunt's testimony, they do not wish to vouch for his credibility, because, they said, the former CIA agent was less than truthful when testifying under immunity before Watergate grand juries in 1973.

"During these sessions," the prosecutors said in legal papers, "it became apparent to the government that Hunt was not being entirely candid with the grand fury." They said that Hunt, even when told he would not be prosecuted for his testimony, tes-מבוא אונוס believe, incompletely."

FBI Reports

In cross-examining Dean, Mr. Bress questioned the former White House counsel about his testimony that Mr. Mardian suggested Dean obtain preliminary FBI reports shortly after the break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Mr. Bress asserted that one of the leaders of the break-in team. Gordon Liddy, and not Mr. Mardian, urged Dean to ask for the reports to keep track of the early investigation

"What you learned about the lead sheets [FBI reports] is what you learned from former FBI agent Liddy," said Mr. Bress, his voice rising to almost a shout. Dean answered calmly that both Liddy and Mr. Mardian had suggested obtaining the lead sheets. At least three times, Mr. Bress attempted to highlight what he thought were inconsistencies in Dean's testimony. Each time, Dean calmly tried to explain any apparent differences.

Mr. Bress sought to demonstrate that Dean knew Liddy had carried out secret and illegal operations for the White House fore Liddy joined former President Richard Nixon's re-election committee.

Dean acknowledged knowing that Liddy "had performed some sensitive things," but said he learned of them long after recommending that Liddy become coun-sel to the financial branch of the re-election committee.

Dean also recounted leaving the White House on June 23, 1972, week after the break-in, to

Supreme Court Justices Hold That Brevity Is a Role of Writ

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (NYT).—The Supreme Court justices have refused for the first time in the memory of court officials to accept a brief filed by an attorney and ordered him to rewrite it or lose his chance to argue his case before the

In a terse order this week, the high court said that Lawrence Huffman, the prosecuting attorney of Allen County, Ohio, had failed to comply with a rule requiring that briefs be "concise and free from burdensome, irrelevant, immaterial and scandal-

By an 8-1 vote, the justices ordered Mr. Huffman's "brief" of more than 100 pages stricken from the court's records.

Air. Huffman's case argued for the reversal of an overarned conviction of a Lima, Ohio, theater operator for showing allegedly obscene motion pictures. Mr. Hulfman had ordered the theater closed as a public nuisance.

The justices may also have objected to his inclusion of an appendix of more than 4,500 still pictures of sexual activity, taken from the motion pictures at issue.

The unusual court order appeared related to efforts by Chief Justice Warren Burger and some of his colleagues to ease the court's mounting work load by insisting on more readily readable legal papers. The dissenter from the order was Justice William Douglas, who has maintained that the court is not overworked.

There had been a warning that the court was prepared to insist on a more economical style. Last January, the justices issued an unsigned order instructing the clerk not to accept papers that fail to meet rules as to the form and size of briefs.

U.S. Is Training Elite Troops For Swift World Deployment

By Drew Middleton

FORT STEWART, Ga., Oct. 25 (NYT).-The 1st Ranger Battalwell advanced ion, a deep-penetration force, is being welded into an elite unit among the pinewoods, swamps and sandy hills of this vast fort. The battalion was activated by the Army in August. It is to be with a basic mission of rapid deployment by air wherever a U.S. military presence is required.

The formation of the three battalions reflects the growing conviction in the Defense Department that the forces must be prepared as much for swift intervention across the world as for a major war against the Soviet Union in Europe.

To military planners these battalions are a weapon that could be deployed to safeguard U.S. economic, strategic or political interests anywhere from the Middle East to the Andes Mountains and from Norway's North Cape to the Indian Ocean With America increasingly dependent on raw materials from countries whose friendship could turn to hostility overnight, the establishing of the Ranger force seems rational to planners. Only the Essentials

The organization of this battalion of 588 men reflects the Rangers' drive to build a force unencumbered by nonessentials. The eadquarters company has about 50 men, a quarter of the number of a similar company in a line division. The cooks and communications specialists, like every-one else in the battalion, have qualified as paratroopers and Rangers, and combat would find them covering the headquarters company's points on the move.

All essential equipment is carried by the Rangers. The bat-talion is lightly armed, with nothing heavier than 60-mm mortars. In action it would rely on bombers or artillery for heavier sup-

Building an elite unit requires a mixture of thoroughness, toughness and a flamboyance that may grate on civilian ears but is part of the élan of all crack When they salute—and they always salute — Rangers bark,

"Rangers lead the way, sir," to which the officer, returning the salute, replies, "All the way." The mixture seems to be working. The grin on the face of Ranger Bill Gardner a: he slipped out of a helicopter down a rope to the squad fanning out in the brush below; the seriousness with which an officer says, "Getting this outfit going, it's sort of like a crusade"; the colonel commanding and the sergeant major leading an exercise and jumping together from the rock-ing helicopter into the black velvet night, are all aspects of this search for elite status.

Before this battalion's training is completed it will have exercised in the mountains of Alaska and Colorado and the deserts of > Vietnam veterans and the new professionals. Almost all the officers served in Vietnam, as did a high percentage of the noncommissioned officers. The great majority of the privates are innocent of combat experience.

> Elite units are the subject of some controversy in military circles. Some senior officers regard the creation of Hitler's Waffen SS and the present KGB divisions in the Soviet Army as a source of weakness rather than strength.

> Such forces, they contend, become a cause of dissension, envied by regular units who believe often with reason, that the elite troops get the best equipment.

Picked Officers

The late Gen. Creighton Abrams, who, as chief of staff, supported the Ranger battalions and picked their officers, believed however, that elite units like this would set a standard in toughess, enterprise and discipline that the rest of the Army would emulate and that, as Ranger noncoms "graduated" to other units, their influence would improve the entire Army

Progress already has been made toward the achievement of a unit personality. For example, there are no moustaches or shocks of long hair in this battalion. There is a glorification of Spartan living and physical achievement. Rangers tell a visitor that the morning included a seven-mile run followed by a four-and-ahalf-mile forced march. Pride is still taken in the battalion's feat of parachuting into Fort Stewart and marching to its quarters in August weather, weather that was classified by the Army as Category Four-that is, weather in which all units are confined to barracks. "We did it," a Ranger said; "98 degrees of heat and full packs and no one else in the Army would go outdoors except to the latrine.

Challenge, physical and mental, and recognition as a special sort of soldier are tools in building the unit

The Ranger is challenged daily by new jobs, by rugged terrain, by unforeseen tactical situations, If he makes it, he is a soldier apart from the tanker and the infantry-

Group Files Suit To Get Access to 147 Nixon Tapes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (WP). -A group of writers, lawyers, film makers and historians—including such well known names as Lillian Hellman, John Hersey and Arthur Schlesinger jr.-filed suit here yesterday in U.S. District Court to gain access to at least 147 tape recording; from the Nixon White House years.

The suit, filed under the Freedom of Information Act, specifies those tapes that were subpoensed by the House Judiciary Committee in its impeachment hearings during the summer. All 147 tapes were never turned over, but Richard Nixon did make public transcripts of about 41 of

The plaintiffs, members of a New York organization called the Committee for Public Justice, previously has asked for disclosure of the material from the General Services Administration. The GSA denied that request earlier this month because it doesn't have custody of the tapes and the Presidential Libraries Act of 1955 exempts presidential materials from the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act,

The plaintiffs said that the denial of access to the material "inhibits their research, writing and publication concerning a historial subject of great public significance, and restricts their rights as citizens to discover if and how the highest office of the land was misused by President Nixon..."

At the same time, Adm. Holloway said, "I think the time has come perhaps to discard some of those programs which have only a marginal return." Following up this statement,

Adm. Holloway dropped the "mod squad," consisting of lieutenant commanders chosen from the top I per cent of their rank group and assigned to lead squadrons that normally would be headed by full commanders. Adm. Zumwalt had further decreed that executive officer and other key billets in the special units would be filled by promising young officers one rank below the usual for such jobs. Navy officials said one of the negative results of this was that the "high performers" suffered

UN Report Finds A-Test Particles At Lowest Level

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 25 (UPI).—Radioactive contamination from nuclear-weapons tests has fallen to the lowest level in almost 20 years, according to a United Nations report. The report said that the presence of strontium-90 and cesium-137-two of the most dangerous nuclear particles—is the lowest since a UN scientific committee began monitoring radioactive fallout in 1955.

The decrease in the atmo spheric levels of strontium-90 and cesium-137, which are transmitted to humans through food, is considered a major spur to a new superpower agreement keeping nuclear tests underground. The committee's report to the presence of fallout has fallen in the Northern and Southern Hemispheres since the outlawing of most atmospheric atomic tests in the mid-1960s.

The report said that contamination of food by strontium-90 and castum-137 "was too low to be detected" except in specific areas, such as in the vicinity of nuclear power plants.

11 Candidates Return Money Offered by AMA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP). -At least 11 congressional can-didates have returned contributions from the American Medical Association's political organization because they believe that voters are skeptical of politicians who take campaign money from special-interest groups.

"The special-interest groups have turned so many people off the election process following Watergate," said Edward Murnane, campaign manager for Rep. Philip Crane, R-III. 'It is a form of influence-peddling the American people have indicated they will not tolerate."

The returns of the contributions were disclosed in campaign finance records filed with the House of Representatives by the AMA's political organization.

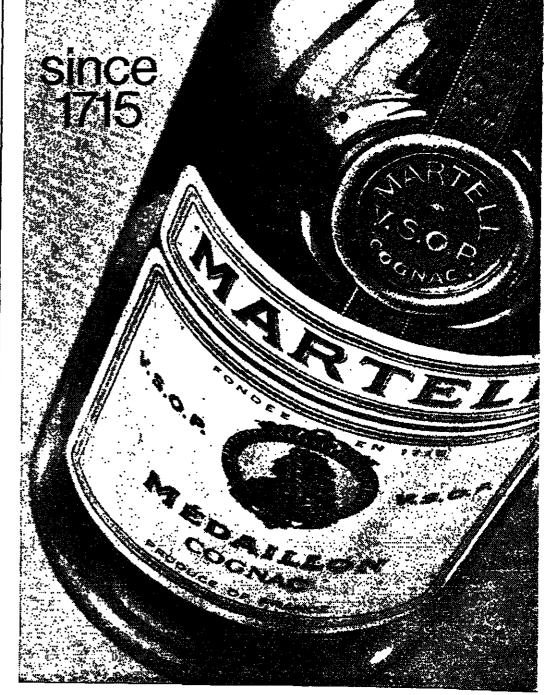

The money is distributed by the American Medical Political Action Committee, one of the richest special-interest groups supporting political campaigns. A spokesman said that the group has contributed to at least 220 Senate and House candidates this year and will give money to more campaigns before the Nov. 5 election. David Baldwin, a spokesman for the AMA, said that the political action committee built its campaign fund with contributions averaging $25 to $30. The largest single offering was $125, he said.

Yekaterina Furtseva, 63, Soviet Minister of Culture

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, Oct. 25 (NYT).— Yekaterina Furtseva, 63, Minister of Culture and the only woman in Soviet history to be chosen a member of the ruling inner circle of the Communist party, died today of a heart attack.

A vigorous, energetic woman born to a family of textile workers, she followed a political career often colored by controversy, as an ally of the late premier and party leader Nikita Khrushchev.

She rose to membership in the ruling Communist party Presid'um in June, 1957, after helping Khrushchev in his power struggle with rivals that year, held a post as a national party secretary and then became minister of culture in May, 1960—a post she held until her death.

Fading Star

Her political star had been fading in recent years, especially after a scandal earlier this year over her construction of a $170,000 dacha outside Moscow for her daughter, using state materials at burgain wholesale prices. She was officially reprimanded, made to repay a large portion of the cost of the dacha and passed over as a candidate for the Suprem Soviet, the nominal Soviet legislature, where she had served for 20 years.

Only personal intervention by pa. leader Leonid Brezhnev was reported to have saved her from being dropped as a minister when the cabinet was officially reconstituted this past summer.

Although she outspekenly condemned Alexander Solzhenitsyn and was publicly critical of abstract modern art, her passing was privately lamented by a number of liberal Soviet intellectuals who feared that a more conservative figure might replace

By experience a Communist party carecrist, organizer and administrator, Mrs. Furtseva was also known for having used her term as minister of culture to promote cultural exchanges with the United States, France, West Germany and other Western na-

So extensive had her foreign contacts and travels become in recent years that there were recurrent rumors that Mrs. Furtseva and her husband, Deputy Foreign Minister Nikolai Firyubin, might be posted to the United Nations. where Mr. Firyubin would become the senior Soviet representative.

It was reported that former critics of Khrushchev had long wanted her removed from the Council of Ministers as one of the last holdovers of the Khrushchev era, and some had seized the dachs scandal as a pretext for replacing her.

In the sphere of domestic cuiture, Mrs. Furtseva was known as a firm administrator who generally took a tough line but had favorites like Bolshoi ballerina Maya Plisetskaya, poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko and even cellist Mstislav Rostropovich, for whom she made exceptions to general

Her early years as minister of culture coincided with the ferment of the Khrushchev period, but subsequently, primary controls over the arts and literature were said to have passed to higher party officials such as Mikhail Suslov, the top party ideologist,

Italian Aide Says Coup Plot Envisioned A-Pollution, Panic

ROME, Oct. 25.—Rightist terrorists planned to pollute Italian aqueducts with radioactive material to cause panic as a first step in a coup which was scheduled to take place two months ago. Defense Minister Giulio An-dreotti said yesterday. Mr. Andreotti told a parliamentary committee that the plot was one of many attributed to rightists.

"The Defense Intelligence Service (SID) delivered a report to the judiciary Oct. 1. mentioning the terrible threat of terrorist use of radioactive material, including pollution of aqueducts," Mr. Andreotti told the Chamber Deputies Defense Committee. He said the plan was "analytically studied and was to be carried out by means of the theft of said material in a north Italian nuclear center.

"It is believed that specific arrest warrants were issued also as a result of this report." Mr. Andreotti said.

Rightist groups have been accused of trying to prepare the ground for a coup by acts of ter-

Mr. Andreotti also shed more light on a rightist coup attempt which was called off after its first stages on the night of Dec. 8, 1970. Investigators said it was led by the late Prince Junio

Valerio Borghese, Mr. Andreotti said there were conflicting reports on what hap-pened. He said that "findings by SID are in contrast with what was stated at the time" by the interior minister of that period, Franco Restivo. The statement was seen as confirmation that armed groups had infiltrated the Interior Ministry and that about 200 paramilitary Forest Rangers moved to within a few hundred yards of the national radio and television center here, as widely published news reports said.

F"empt Called Off The order to attack never came and the attempt was called off for undisclosed reasons. Prince Borghese, a Fascist war hero, died in Spain in August.

Members of his clandestine National Front, mostly diehard Fascists, are still operating in the country, Mr. Andreotti said. The minister ruled out any cooperation with the plotters from the armed forces.

Role of Doctor, a Suicide, Is Questionable

Tracing Bizarre Death of an Amin Ex-Wife

By Dial Torgerson

NAIROBI, Oct. 25.—The soldiers exhumed the body of Dr. Peter Mbalu Mukasa, put handcuffs on it and took it from the family burial plot in southwest Uganda to Kampala, the capital. This month, it is still in the mortuary of Kampala's Mulago Hospital. The family is afraid to try to claim it. Mr. Mukasa poisoned himself rather than be questioned about the death in August of Kay Adroa Amin, a former wife of Uganda's President Idi Amin. In Uganda, where it is an honor to be buried with one's ancestors. Dr. Mukasa has been denied that privilege.

Question Remains And the question remains, two months after Mrs. Amin's bisarre death, whether the doctor was responsible for it.

Many persons in Uganda believe that Gen. Amin had his former wife killed, and that the body was cut in four parts and hidden in the doctor's car to incriminate him.

Gen- Amin's version is that she died during an unsuccessful, illegal abortion performed by the physician, who panicked and dissected the body.

In : ither case. Dr. Mukasa, a spected Kampala surgeon about 40 years of age, must have realiz-

On Aug. 13, the doctor gathered his wife and five children, aged 2 to 7, around him in their home in the Kampala suburb of Rubaga. He told them he had to give them medicine for a new strain of malaria.

Drought Pockets Part of the controversy involve Ethiopia's continuing reluctance to tap its own a silable resource to deal with what most foreign relief experts feel are now no more than "pockets of drought" scattered across this mountain kingdom. The government now has mure than $300 million in gold and foreign-exchange holdings, an all-time high, and many donor nations feel that some of that money should be used to purchase cereals. While Ethlopia has received 140,000 tons of grain free from a variety of international sources, it has so far porchased only 2,000 tons from local commercial markets estimated in May to have as much as 30,000 tons in stcck Furthermore, it appears that the country's new ruling Provisional Military Council has plans to use a good portion of these holdings to buy arms rather than grain. Recent reports from Washington said that Ethiopia is planning to spend upwards of $100 million to buy heavy tanks, aircraft and other military equip-

Heart Disease Link to Coffee Unconfirmed

Boston Researchers Find No Tie to Onset

BOSTON, Oct. 25 (AP). -Researchers say they find no evidence that drinking coffee leads to development of heart disease. But they say it could be harmful to people who already cave heart problems.

A study published yesterday in the New England Journal of Medicine concluded that there was no evidence that coffee "is a factor in the development of atherosclerotic cardiovascular dis-

The researchers found that men who drank more than four cups of coffee a day had a higher than expected death rate from cardiovascular disease. But they said that could be because of a link between coffee drinking and cigarette smoking. Persons who did not drink coffee smoked an average of 8.7 cigarettes a day, while those drinking more than seven cups of coffee smoked an average of 21.8 cigarettes daily, the study

"The relation of overall mor-tality to level of coffee consumption appears to be based on the association between coffee drinking and cigarette smoking," the study said.

No Increase for Women

Women in the study who were heavy coffee drinkers showed no increased death risk associated with heart disease, the researchers said probably reflecting established lower cigarette consumption by females.
The relationship between coffee and heart disease has been controversial since the publication two years ago of a statistical study by the Boston Collab-orative Drug Surveillance Pro-That report sampling hospitalized heart patients, found a direct link between coffee consumption and heart trouble. But several later studies by other researchers found no such telationship in sampling persons without existing heart problems Dr. Hershel Jick, director of that first controversial study, said in an interview that the new report "is not necessarily incom-patible with ours," since different test groups-one with and the other without existing heart problems-were used. The latest study was conducted by Dr. Thomas Dawber, Dr William Kannel and Tavia Gordon of Boston University Medical Center and the Framingham Heart Disease Epidemio.ogy

THE ART MARKET...

Cologne and Dusseldorf Vie in Avant-Garde Field

By Souren Melikian

COLOGNE, Oct. 25 (IRT).—The rival fairs of contemporary ert held every fall in the neighboring cities of Cologne and Dusseldorf offered a striking contrast But both closed yesterday on a similar note of ambiguity.

In Dusseldorf, the 4th Internationaler Markt für aktuelle Kungt. reminded me of a Middle Eastern caravan that had just camped for the night: There were 217 galleries from all over the world with endless stands sprawling over two vast halls, giving the impression of hopeless confusion. Someone was always readjusting something somewhere Flimsy low partitions separated stands that sometimes seemed deliberately to plagiarize one another the better to confuse the innocent visitor. Someone who must believe (erroneously) that he has a special gift for organization numbered the subdivisions (Hallen, in German) by letters and the galleries by numbers so that the eye was caught by huge A, B, C, etc., panels giving the show a Kafka-like air. The feeling was strengthened by the surprising diversity of works. At one stand, (Inge Baecker of Bochum; walls were covered with black and white photographs, A closer look revealed that they were photos of works of art or, more often, happenings. And some showed top American work such

After Dusselderf, the Cologne fair, in a smaller building with "only" 73 participants from nine countries, was all cool orderliness and elegance. Called the Internationaler Kunstmarkt Köln it was of somewhat higher quality than the Dusseldorf undertaking

Invitation Only

Several dealers made it plain that, in their view, this was The place for the elite. Participation was by invitation only, whereas in Dusseldorf anyone could show for a fee. However, not all dealers saw it that way. A few among the better known, such as the Galerie Denise René-Hans Meyer of Dusseldorf, had chosen to play it safe and participate in both fairs. In Cologne, as in Dusseldorf, monotony was the most striking feature, although on a lesser scale.

Commercially, there were some stunning success stories. In Dus-

Two days before the Dusseldorf fair opened officially, she sold a large square composition with comic strip inserts done by the American Allan Kaprow in 1956 to a Dutch museum for 30,000 deutsche marks.

In Cologue, the biggest success story was that of the Galerie André Emmerich of Zurich, a branch of the New York gallery of the same name, which has specialized in American art for many years. The Zurich operation was opened in May, 1973. The firm represents such painters as Sam Francis, Helen Frankenthaler and Robert Motherwell and now has a regular following among European collectors, the Zurich director Maria Reinshagen said. This explains, she said, why the gallery sold more than 400,000 deutsche marks worth of art during the five-day fair. Of five Frankenthalers on display, three were sold almost at once. One was acquired by the Wallraf Richartz Museum of Cologue, which has built up the largest and most representative collection of 20thcentury American art in Europe.

A Milan Gallery

Mrs. Reinshagen said that business this year at the fair was just as satisfactory as it had been the year before in Dusseldorf. She believes that her gallery is not feeling the economic pinch because, as she put it in English, "We offer an American program represented by only two other galleries in Germany." She pointed out that visitors to the Cologne fair were mostly German. This included museum curators interested in avant-garde work and

However, Rodolfo Siviero, surrounded by precious paintings, drawings, and sculptures, is neither a curator nor a collector. He is an art sleuth.

For the past 30 years, Siviero, 35, who has the rank of minister plenipotentiary, has headed the office for the recovery of works of art, His task: a relentless hunt for art objects smuggied or stolen from Italy.

Lest year, 8500 works of art were stolen in Italy. Siviero is still trying to track down some of the thousands of art objects taken from Italy by the Germans during World War II.

1,000 Items

"We've got back about 4,000 places," he says, "but there are still about 1,000 items still missing somewhere in Germany and Austria, we think."

At the moment, Siviero is conducting delicate negotiations with foreign governments and museum directors, negotiations that he hopes will lead to the return to Italy of, among other things, the Euphronics vase at New Disappointments at a Sale Of Impressionists in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25 (NYT).-A huge painting by the French artist Jean Dubuflet brought a record price of $340,000 at an auction of impressionist and modern paintings and sculpture this week at Sotheby Parke Bernet. The sale of the painting to Peter Matthews, a London dealer, was the high spot of a disappointing evening, in which about one-third of the works offered were, according to the auctioneer, bought back by their owners, and prices, particularly for the impressionist school were well be-

The groans from the audience were audible as three of the star paintings, Monet's "Field of Poppies," Modigliani's "Portrait of Thora Klinckow-strom" and Braque's "Guitar, Fruit and Picture," estimated at $250,000, $350,000 and $400,000, were bought back. So was the Degas "Danseuse Rose," estimated at $150,000, and Picasso's 'Frénésie," estimated at $160,000. A large Matisse painting, "Michaels," was one of the few to Salvador Dali's "Battle Around a Dandellon," bought by an Italian dealer for $100,000, surprised the audicace by going some $10,000 over its estimate.

Picasso Work But a Picasso painting, "Dora Maar," sold last year to a Japa-nese dealer for $180,000, was bought back at $130,000.

· The auction had been looked to as a barometer of art prices for the coming season, and had attracted a crowd of dealers from throughout the world. However. most of the dealers were cautious in their assessment, blaming the poor response on overhigh estimates and reserves.

"It's time that collectors understood that expectations are too high," said Klaus Perls, a New York dealer. "If Polaroid stock is selling for $22 why should their paintings continue to bring high prices?"

Generally, the sale confirmed slide in impressionist prices and demand for this school of work, but Paul Rewald, head of Sotheby Parke Bernet's impressionist and modern paintings department, said that in view of the depressed economy "an enor-mous effort" had been made to persuade consigners to lower their reserves—the minimum price below which a work would not be sold-and that most consigners had been receptive. The auction, which had been estimated to gross $6 million to $7 million, actually brought $4.785 million. It was in sharp contrast to a similar sale last May which fetched $8.3 million.

Nazi 'Rubbish' Makes $250.000 At Munich Sale

MUNICH, Oct. 25 (UPI).-

American and European collectors scooped up 350 pieces of "rubbish" belonging to Adolf the items officially went on sale. The articles, ranging from delicate porcelain to nursery rhymes. came from the private collection of the late Hermann Goering, commander of the Nazi Luftwaffe and Hitler's right-hand man. Buyers paid a total of $250.000 for the erticles.

A spokesman for the state of Bavaria, which stored the goods for two decades, said, "We've got no use for this rubbish now." Bavaria put the collection in the hands of Munich's 160-year-old Weinmueller-Neumeister auction ed up in a Swiss bank vault: and a Bernini bust of Pope Urban VIII which found its way to the National Gallery of Canada. Siviero's staff consists of himself and a dozen assistants who try to track down the missing art objects and then conduct the negotiations to retrieve them. One of his most successful accomplishments in recent years was the recovery of a master-piece by Raphael from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts in 1971.

In such complicated negotiations, Siviero, who is a singleminded, hard-driving man, nevertheless believes in making haste slowly.

Not Simple

"I have no doubt that the Euphronios vase came from Italy," he says. "But getting things back that were removed illegally from Italy is not a simple matter,

"The laws and regulations vary from country to country as to the legal ownership of a work of art that has gone through several hands. In some countries, you could hang a Leonardo da Vinct on your wall five years after it was stolen and be perfectly legal."

So Siviero, whose office comes under the jurisdiction of the Foreign Ministry, first tries the lengthy diplomatic approach to other museum men and foreign governments. "Basically we try to get the other governments or the owners of these works of art to recognize the well-founded international principle," he says, "and that is artifacts of a nation's patrimony illegally remov-ed from a country should be returned. Surely all men of culture should agree on this."

Siviero's problem, of course, is that men of culture often do not recognize the principle. Has the British Museum offered to return the Elgin marbles to Greece? Or Italy itself sent back to Egypt the obelisks now in Rome?

Similarly, the Metropolitan Museum maintains that it has a clear and valid title to the Euphronics vase for which it paid an estimated $1 million. Then, too, Italy does not have the funds compensate buyers who might decide to return the works of Boston Raphael The Boston Raphael was worth $800,000, and Siviero was instrumental in putting U.S. legal pressure on the museum, which resulted in the return. A native of Florence, Siviero got into the art detection field during World War II. As a memher of the resistance, he provided information to the Allies, and having been trained as an art critic and historian specializing in sance periods, he kept a close eye on the works of art that were tematically stripped from Italian churches and museums and shipped off to Germany.

He and other Florentines, in fact, transported some of the most precious works in the Uffizi and Pitti galieries in Florence to the peasants in the countryside to be hidden from the Ger-

"Toward the end of the war," he recalls, "I began working with the Allied Commission of Fine Arts to track down the things the Germans had taken. That started me in the field."

Recovery Office

After the war. Siviero was put in charge of the art recovery office, and he spent five years in Germany attempting to locate the hundreds of masterpleces that were stashed away all over the country: Tintorettos, Titians, Tiepolos, Canalettos, Rubense Caravaggios. Through his efforts, too, the peace treaty that was eventual signed by the Italians had a pri vision calling for the return

Italy of works of art that he been taken out of the count during the war, not only by the Nazis but by some avaricious a Hes as well. Siviero's latest project is a c talogue, currently being printe which lists all the major worl of art which are still miss

It's this aspect of the project —if you specify dealers' roles in forming popular taste, as wellthat is most interesting. That role changes, as the times do. But one thing remains constant. Dealers -more than critics, surely-shape the taste of collectors. This can be both good and bad. It's good when an Andrew Mellon was persuaded by that most lordly of dealers, Duveen, to buy top Italian old masters which eventually went into the National Gallery in Washington. It's bad when dozens of lesser collectors of the period were also persuaded to buy British 18th-century portraits because it gave them an aura of distinguished but ersatz ancestry. and the result was that for decades the popular notion of quality in art was those generally second-rate portraits hanging in of them touches reality at any point. If you pricked them, they would bleed grease paint. The ending of the play—with true happiness within reach—is particularly inapposite, a senti-mental sop to Mr. Simon's intended audience, a cynical reversal of the theme of his play which is, anyway, hardly original—that the middle classes are trapped in futile lives, that the only hope is to laugh to keep from crying.

Whatever the failures of the play, by the standards of current West End comedy, it is superior entertainment, a witty work by a master craftsman. Vivian Matalon directs, with pace and wit, and Miss Stritch, uncoiling her long whiplash legs and rasping her lines with impeccable timing. is delightful—although I would like to see her play some other part on stage than the experienced drunk

Mr. Simon's skills are superior to those of Alun Owen's, as ex-hibited in his "The Male of the Species" at the Piccadilly, three one-act works with excellent performances from Edward Woodward as three expert seducers. Michelle Dotrice, too, is appealing as the eternal victim although she is given less opportunities to display her talents.

Mr. Owen is a playwright of great talent but here—in work originally written for television his material is thin and shallow. Once the pattern is set in the first play—with Mr. Woodward as a to his daughter about his rela-tionships with women—it is merely repeated in the others. The third begins with a slight varia-tion as Miss Dotrice plays hard to get, but even that ends in the same manner, with the male triumphant.

There is little attempt to examine the psychology of the compulsive seducer, merely a chance for Mr. Woodward to display his abilities to play a Scots-man, a Welshman and an Irishskill. Each play resolves itself in a confrontation between man and girl that are both artificial and unconvincing. It is strictly a male chauvinist view of sexual relationships, as a battleground in which women are always the Both plays, though, are considerably better than the revival of an ancient boulevard comedy. André Roussin's "The Little Hut" at the Duke of York's, This 25year-old play has transferred to London from the recent Oxford Theatre Festival, which, judging from this and the festival's other success "The Dame of Sark," seems to have been a celebration of senility. The play, originally directed in London by the young Peter Brook, was once consider ed daring in the way it dumped a wife, her husband and lover on an island and watched them work out their relationships. But now it seems dull. Only the fact of a desert island existence could make the character played by Geraldine McEwen seem attractive and there is also an excessively stiff performance from Gerald Harper as her puritanical lover.

> -MICHAEL GIBSON. Rome

Danish Art From Classicism to Romanticism, Museum of Rome, Palazzo Braschi, Rome, through

This is a small but interesting study of the influence classic Rome exercised on Danish artists living in the city from the beginning to the middle of the 19th century. There are drawings by Thorvaldsen, of course, and cool, delicate oils of temples by Koebkc. His loving attention to detail of plant and animal life among the ruins is rendered in his drawings. Eckersberg shows in his paintings that the Vis Sacra was as tidy as a Victorian park before modern excavation began, Portraits in oil or pen of the pinkfaced relatives of these Northern painters are as homey and rugged as Anderson's prose. This is a careful representation of modest but thoughtful work. In the permanent collection the vivid watercolors of Pinelli (1781-1835) of Roman mores and customs and the sweeping "redute" by Caffi (1809-66) should not be overlooked.

Giosetta Fioreni, Oca. 42 Via dell'Oca, Rome, through Nov.

Bits and shreds of things, pencil shavings, buttons, like thistledown have come to settle on delicate off-kilter drawings on schoolbook paper. Floroni has reminisced about her childhood before in similar studies, but this time, neither self-indulgent nor sentimental she makes her sophisticated drawing-collages with a pleasing freshness and a masterful hand. Once close to a Roman school of refined pop whose followers now have either turned to social realism or supertasteful repetitive abstraction, Fioroni with this show, while still drawing a little on the willful language of Novelli or Twombly, has evolved a whimsy and artlessness of her own.

Kurhajec, Etruschudens, 77 Piazza Navona, Rome, through Nov.

Allusions to the castle keep, the dungeon and the corral make Kurhajec's sculptures both magical and sinister. They are fashioned from plowshares, wine-barrel hoops and other peasant implements found around this American's house in the Etruscan town of Sutri. Pieces of iron are put into traps or horses's harnesses and are adorned with ox horns and feathers, the contrasts of materials and color startling and intriguing. There is a funkiness and starkness about the best of these objects which makes them welcome fetishes for those who, engulfed by technology, yearn for the lost romance of the Far West or for the Middle Ages. Chadwick's recent bronzes are technically accomplished Recumbent or standing figures with insect legs clothed in planed volumes of drapery topped by triangular heads if female or cobes if male come in pairs. The faceless royal couples, something like chessmen, make somber monuments. But a single Max Ernst-like invention has become a formula with variations repeated ad infinitum. Often figurative elements like the queen's realistically molded breasts seem to strain through the modernistic convention. Chadwick, like Moore with his holes, hides his basic academicism behind contemporary devices.

Ford vs. Ford

stage on which two plays are being acted side by side, with President Ford the leading character in both. In one scenario, he earns applause for having replaced a devious, solitary, autocratic Richard Nixon with his own gregarious frankness and simplicity. In the other, he disturbs the audience with inexplicable deviations and decisions that shock and confound political friends and opponents alike.

As White House policy decisions increasingly run counter to expectations based on the President's appealing personal qualities, the glaring contradictions between promise and performance call for scrutiny. Examples of Mr. Ford's questionable decision-making abound in the first two months of his pres-

• After stating publicly that he would consider extending a presidential pardon to Mr. Nixon after the judicial process had run its course, Mr. Ford suddenly reversed himself by granting a pre-emptive unconditional pardon for any and all crimes Mr. Nixon may have committed during his presidency.

 Although he knew that the answers to serious questions concerning abuses of executive power in the Nixon administration remain to be extracted from the former President's tapes and documents, Mr. Ford hastily, and without consulting Congress, the special Watergate prosecutor or the courts, signed a highly dubious agreement that would place these materials in Mr. Nixon's sole custody.

• Although he himself has acknowledged that Mr. Nixon was guilty of impeachable offenses, Mr. Ford approved of huge payments and privileges to the former President far beyond the requirements of law. He even authorized the continued transmission of secret intelligence reports to Mr. Nixon by military jet.

• While capitalizing in his early addresses to the nation on the theme of compromise and cooperation with Congress, Mr. Ford

The White House currently appears as a has now chosen an extreme partisan role on the hustings. Even allowing for verbal excesses that accompany normal last-minute appeals to the voters, Mr. Ford's extravagant predictions of dire consequences that would flow from Democratic victories raise questions about the sincerity of his appeals to

• Confronted by the desperate mayors of the nation's cities, he pledged strong personal support to enactment of legislation to aid urban mass-transit; but when the bill bogged down in the House Rules Committee. he remained silent, explaining his passivity by declaring that the legislation was already a fait accompli. Similarly after telling Congress that it must give highest priority to national health insurance, he let the subject drop with nothing achieved.

Since Mr. Ford obviously is not wanting in congressional experience, one explanation for these apparent contradictions is lack of personal conviction. Many of the crucial issues requiring his leadership run counter to the parochial conservatism of his prepresidential years in the House.

Apart from any specific policy decisionsand even more disconcerting for the long run of his stewardship-President Ford appears generally to have been slow to understand that he is not the routine inheritor of a departed administration. He is President only because his predecessor and his entourage betrayed the public trust. In many respects, Mr. Ford has been suggesting by his actions that he is perpetuating a discredited regime.

But the American people are looking for something far better than that, for an entirely new chapter in the presidency. What Mr. Ford needs to do, and do quickly, is to throw off the incubus of the Nixon administration that still seems to be weighing him down, and to respond fully and freely to the nation's urgent need for wise and independent leadership.

To Keep Pretoria In

Nothing would be gained either for the cause of world peace and security or for the effectiveness of the UN by expelling the white government of South Africa from the UN. On the contrary, the chances for a peaceful evolution to self-determination and majority rule in both South Africa and Namibia (South-West Africa) will be greater if the Pretoria government remains in the organization of which it is an original member.

South Africa's continued control over Namibia has been illegal since the UN General Assembly in 1966 terminated Pretoria's League of Nations mandate over the territory. But for all the rhetoric at the UN, no state or any combination of member states is going to try to oust South Africa from Namibia by force.

The best way to bring about South Africa's exodus from the territory is to keep pressure on Pretoria to validate the recent pledge of its foreign minister that "all options are open" for Namibia, including full independence if its people should so decide "in the exercise of their right to self-determination." No one will expect miracles but it is somewhat encouraging that South Africa's stance on Namibia is changing.

As for the situation inside its own borders, Pretoria's racial apartheid is abhorrent. But expulsion from the UN not only would fail to hasten eradication of apartheid or the coming of majority rule; it would be of dubious legality under the UN Charter. There is much hypocrisy in the loud advocacy of expulsion by nations whose practice of racial and tribal persecution is fully as obnoxious as S uth African apartheid.

In an organization whose aim has rightly been the achievement of universality, expulsion of a member would set a dangerous precedent-as indeed did the ouster of Taiwan. Any such resolution should be rejected in the Security Council, or vetoed by the United States if necessary.

World Economy

The conclusion must be that 1975 will indeed he a recession year, but that it will also see increasingly vigorous reflationary measures in all the main centers. Unemployment in most countries may continue to rise throughout the year, but by the end of it the bottom of the recession in output is likely to have passed The greater danger is that the reflationary measures will continue strongly long after the recovery is in fact established, thereby precipitating excessive expansion and a repetition of the crisis of 1973-only worse this time.

Peking and the EEC

The red carpet laid out by Peking for Danish Premier Poul Hartling illustrates the importance China attaches to EEC countries and its expectations of West European unity. Mr. Hartling's visit had a particular significance after Britain's Labor government had been returned to power. China's hopes that Britain will play an important role in the European community have dimmed. Peking now looks to the other EEC members, large and small, to form a united. and strong community as a wedge against what it described as "the superpower hegemony" of the United States and the Soviet

Giscard's EEC Summit Call

Since the fiasco of the Copenhagen summit almost a year ago, there has been an understandable reluctance on the part of some member countries, notably West Germany, to try again. There has been a growing realization that such meetings are worthwhile only if they are carefully prepared and stripped of the unfulfillable commitments of the past: For example, rapid progress towards economic and monetary union. At least on the face of it, this view has also been accepted by the French. Yet, with only a few weeks to go, there has been very little effective preparation for the meeting in

Moscow and the Olympic Games

The holding of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow presents a host of challenges which not only stem from the atmosphere of détente but will also test its theories. In practical terms there is no doubt that the Soviet Union has the facilities. The seriousness with which sport is taken on a national level means that there will be more than enough room for athletes to run, jump, wrestle, ride, swim and throw missiles to their limits. Moscow should have no difficulty either in dealing with the traffic and visitors attracted by such events. But what will be tested is burezucracy, which is notoriously cumbersome and slow-moving.

October 26, 1924 PARIS-Among the new revivals on Paris screens at the moment, there is one to be especially noted; it is "A Woman of Paris" (Opinion Publique), Charlie Chaplin's first film of his own direction, in which effects are obtained with a remarkable simplicity of means. Edna Purviance, Carl Miller and Adolphe Menjou are the principal players.

If, in fact, this was an accurate description of the agreement, it was violated in February, 1971. That month, a nuclear-powered November-class submarine with a tender visited Clenfuegos, Whether the submarine actually was serviced in the port remains a most point, but there were no U.S. protests. Nor did the United States protest subsequent visits by Echo-class submarines nuclearpowered vessels carrying tactical missiles.

It seems evident that the Sovict Union has been probing the margins of the 1970 understanding. It has done the following, in this order: put a nuclearpowered attack submarine into Cientuegos with a tender, put a nuclear-powered tectical missile submarine into Cienfuegos with a tender, put a diesel-powered strategic missile submarine into a different Cuban port quietly, and put a diesel-powered strategic missile submarine into a different Cuban port publicly. This is just what may be learned from the

Export Credit Pact

In another development, sources here disclosed that the United States and four other major nations reached an agreement in Washington last month to virtually end export credits to industrialized and oil-producing countries.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon got the approval of France, Germany, Britain and Japan at an "informal" meeting of the five on Sept. 29. News of the pact surfaced after other members of the Common Market were asked to join.

A De Facto Ban

Under the terms of the export credit pact the signatory countries bind themselves not to grant government export credits to any "wealthy" country for periods longer than three years. As virtually no credits are given for such short periods, it imposes a de facto ban on all export credits to these nations.

In addition, if export credits to other countries run for five or more years, a minimum lending rate of 7.5 per cent annually must be used. The signatory nations are also bound to stop using subsidies on such credits.

The last provision is aimed at preventing cut-throat compelition for export markets in Eastern Europe and third-world nations.

Swedes Act on Work Monotony

MALMO, Sweden, Oct. 25 (AP-DJ).-Faster than industrial enterprises elsewhere, companies around Sweden are facing up to a nasty fact of modern industrial life; high pay does not necessarily make for a happy worker.

Swedish industrialists see the same symptoms of employee disaffection as exist elsewhere. What distinguishes the most ambitious Swedish efforts to cure the problem are the dual themes of decentralization and dialogue.

The idea is to put some variety and some re-sponsibility into crushingly tedious but crucially important production jobs. If the worker is given more responsibility, he feels more responsibleand more tied to the company, it is reasoned.

At Kockums shipyard here it seems to work. In 1969, personnel turnover was running at an annual rate of 50 per cent a year and management, by calling in efficiency experts and pressing for more production, only inflamed the situation. Then management approached the union, got its suggestions, and now uses worker-managen committees even for advice on supertanker construction schedules. The firm feels it has boosted both production and worker satisfaction. Now there are work-enrichment experiments all around Sweden. Best-known is the Volvo automobile plant at Kalmar, where the conventional assembly line has been scrapped and groups of workers assemble an entire auto rather than carry out a single operation.

Some other examples in various industries:

• Asea, the big manufacturer of electrical equipment for industry, has moved the office onto the factory floor at a plant in Vasteras that makes relays. Engineers, salesmen, product-design people and other white-collar workers share facilities with production workers. Curt Nicolin, Asea president, notes that the experiment has spurred efforts to reduce noise, improve lighting and correct other "evils which stem from the manufacturing process."

· At Hallstavik, just outside Stockholm, the Hollens Bruk group has enlisted its workers to help design and build a big paper mill. The idea is to make the working environment as attractive as possible and shape it to the workers' needs.

At Vasby foundry, a die-casting shop in the Granges group, the 60 production workers have been reorganized into eight semiautonomous groups sharing equally in production bonuses for work turned out by the foundry.

· The Orrefors glassworks, which was suffering from uneven work flow in the grinding and polishing department, turned the operation over to the workers, who reorganized it into three separate production groups. Jobs are rotated to make for variety and interest. At the rock-drilling machine assembly department of the Atlas Cooco group, outside Stockholm, workers have replaced the assembly line with a round table for group work and a system of shared monetary rewards. Sweden's blue collar labor problems began in the late 1960s—ironically, during a boom. With labor in demand, workers were deserting the tedious jobs on the production line. The current changes from assembly line to round table may not sound very thrilling to a white collar observer. For assembly line workers, they can revolutionize their jobs. Instead of doing one operation enclessly, they may do several, mble an entire unit. If a worker learns several operations, job rotation becomes possible. Workers also have been clamoring for an end to the old piecework wage system (except for younger workers with abundant energy and a short-term view). But they do not want a complete switchover to fixed wages. Employers agree that the best configuration seems to be a pay package in which 70 to 90 per cent is fixed, and further pay comes from premiums and production

Use of Escalator Clause Is Spreading

U.S. Workers Win Larger Pay Increases

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP-DJ).-Wage increases in major U.S. labor settlements continued to grow in the third quarter as first-year pay boosts swelled and more contract included cost-ofliving escalator clauses.

PARIS, Oct. 25 (IET).—A 10-per-cent plunge in imports help-ed the United States reduce its trade deficit last month while a continuing rise in exports pushed West Germany's trade surplus still higher, figures released in Washington and Wiesbaden showed today.

In Washington, the Commerce Department said that imports fell by 103 per cent while exparts dropped only 1 per cent, leaving a deficit of $233 million. That shortfall was sharply reduced from the record $1.13-nillion deficit set in August and was the smallest deficit since last April, when the United States achieved a trade surplus of $92.8 million. A sharp drop in imports of food, oil and cars was mainly responsible for the lower deficit. Germany, meanwhile, said its trade surplus in September rose to 4.073 billion marks from 3.255 billion marks in August and 3.781 billion marks in September, 1973.

Germany's excess of exports over imports for the first nine months of the year now totals almost 37 billion marks, well ahead of the 33-billion-mark figure for all of last year.

Exports jumped by 31 per cent for the January-to-September period this year compared to 1973, while imports rose more slowly, at 25 per cent.

This has happened despite the increase in the international value of the mark, which made German goods more expensive, and despite the country's huge oil bill. Germany is the biggest oil importer in Europe.

The German statistics office noted that September exports were worth 18.821 billion marks, 3 per cent more than in August, and imports were 2 per cent lower at 14.748 billion marks.

While exports continue to thrive, the domestic economy is close to stagnation and financial observers saw this as one cause for the lower imports. Big German trade surpluses are usually partly offset by deficits

October is generally one of the strongest months for new car sales because it is very early in the model year, which begins in September for most companies although introduction dates were delayed this year to permit dealers to sell some of the 1974 cars that had backed up in inventories.

But consumer worries about the future of the economy have had a dampening effect on new car sales, helping make it the worst new-model introduction period since 1964. "We need a restoration of consumer confidence." Chrysler chairman Lynn Townsend said Tuesday, "Washington has told everyone not to buy and the recession is here now in the auto industry. This 'don't buy' philosophy is hurting us."

Another deterrent to sales is higher prices. Price tags on the 1975 models are on the average nearly $1,000 above those on 1974 models when they were introduced, and auto industry executives say they may have to raise prices still further because of soaring costs.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 636.19, down 0.07 point. Volume totaled 12.65 million shares compared with 14.91 million yesterday.

Brokers related the strong early gain to a new 1/4-point prime rate cut to 11 per cent by First National City Bank, a surge in the money supply and a significant decline in business bank loan demand at major New York banks.

However, they added that investors continued to be troubled about a slowing economy and un-

How Value Line Can Help You

GET READY NOW for the NEXT BULL MARKET

Value Line expects you may well see the Dow Jones Industrials close to 2000 within the next five years.

Sure, we have inflation and, sure, inflation is bad for stocks and everybody. But consider the implications of the following scenario which in our opinion describes the least improbable event:

Inflation is stopped finally, but only after the price level is 30% to 40% higher. Such a price level means a very much higher Gross National Product — up about 60% in the next five years.

Profits then should go up too, at least as much, because the ratio of corporate profits and dividends to the Gross National Product is right now too low to permit business to expand the way it must if it is to provide jobs, reduce unemployment, and maintain the standard of living of the country. Corporate profits then, as we see it, will probably rise 60% to 80% in the next five years on a 60% rise in the Gross National Product.

Inflation will be a good part of the reason. But once inflation is brought under control at the higher price level, the investor will be looking at earnings of about 5135 a share on the Dow Jones Industrial Average. And he will then also be looking at a normal multiple on these earnings again. Instead of 8.8 times earnings, on the Dow and a current 12% interest rate, the multiple will probably be 13 times again — or even higher — and the interest rate and the real growth rate will both be lower.

Under conditions like these, which are the least improbable that can be foreseen, the Dow Jones Industrial Average will be in the 2000 range.

Yet the Dow Jones Industrials are not the bargain sector of nor, we venture to predict, within 30% of it. So ag the stock market. The average price-earnings multiple of all ready now—deliberately and with your eyes open.

the stocks of the 1536 monitored by the Value Line Survey which report earnings at all is only 6 times. That means that the run-of-the-mill stocks right now offer an earnings yield of 16%%. And these earnings over the past five years have on average grown at the rate of 9% per annum. The investor then is looking at a market that right now yields a total return of 25%, if the 9% growth rate of the past five years holds. When inflation has been brought under control and earnings per share are higher, the earnings yield at current price will be 27% or greater on current price. Even with the growth rate then down to 4%, the investor who buys today is locking in an earnings yield plus a growth rate that gives him a total return of around 31% a year.

This is just the average of rua-of-the-mill stocks. The outstanding bargains promise even greater returns.

Today's values in the stock market are fantastic, even in terms of the average stock. Just as fantastic as the insane anticipation of everlasting rapid growth that characterized the stock market in the Sixties—against which the Value Line Service warned persistently all during those years.

Insanity in the stock market is always corrected. It will be again. In fact, the only way the market can be stopped from rising to record highs is by dismantling the political economy and turning the nation into a socialist state. On the assumption that this will not happen, we urge you to

Get Ready For the Bull Market That is Coming

We are not unaware of the possibility of financial crisis. Were it not for tight money, the stock market would not be as low as it is. In the end, value will determine stock prices, and value, be assured, is not always the same thing as price. It wasn't the same in the Sixties. It isn't now.

Note: this market is thin—both ways. The intelligent strategy is to prepare to buy deliberately and on a scale. Not much buying is going to be accomplished at the exact bottom nor, we venture to predict, within 30% of it. So again—get ready now—deliberately and with your eyes open.

To help you identify the coming generation of stock market leaders, as well as stocks you should completely avoid, The Value Line Investment Survey continually rates over 1500 stocks for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months:

100 stocks are ranked 1 (Highest)
300 stocks are ranked 2 (Above Average)
700 stocks are ranked 3 (Average)
300 stocks are ranked 4 (Below Average)
100 stocks are ranked 5 (Lowest)

Not every stock will always perform exactly in accordance with its Value Line rating, but such a large majority have over a period of many years that we believe you would seriously "short change" yourself if you don't put these Performance ratings to work in your own strategy.

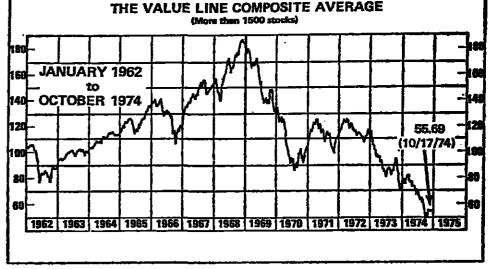

Getting Beneath The Surface

All told, Value Line gives you more comprehensive data and ratings of 1500 stocks than any other source we've ever seen. For each stock, Value Line regularly presents the detailed statistical history—on 23 key investment factors—going back 10 years. Plus future estimates for the next 3-to-5 years. When you look at the sample Value Line report reproduced in this memorandum—which is typical of the continually updated reports we issue on each of the more than 1500 stocks—you'll see what we mean by "getting beneath the surface."

This, of course, requires a massive research effort. To that end, Value Line employs 70 full-time professional research specialists, whose major purpose is the continuing study of investment values. They are backed by extensive computer facilities, which enable us to give you—in addition to the full-page reports—a complete summary of our evaluations of each of the more than 1500 stocks updated every week. You are never left "hanging."

Time-Tested Experience

Value Line has been through almost every conceivable kind of stock market and economic circumstance. We have assisted private and institutional investors—many thousands of them—for nearly 40 years ... ever since the depths of the depression of the 1930's. During this long span, countless brokers and other investment advisers have come and gone, but not Value Line. You can count on us.

Rating Today's Investments

Value Line recognizes that a great many private investors are, in their own right, highly skilled in making judgments about stock values. So we provide the vital data we believe you need to draw your own investment conclusions. We do not ask you to follow us "blindly".

We also present our own investment conclusions on each of the more than 1500 stocks, against which you can match your judgments.

Specifically:

- We rate each stock—relative to all the other over 1500 stocks—for Probable Market Performance in the Newt 12 Months (as outlined above).
- •We rate each stock (from 1 down to 5) for relative investment Safety.
- We estimate each stock's Appreciation Potentiality over the next 3 to 5 years, specifically indicating its price "target range" in that future period.
- •We estimate each stock's Dividend Yield during the 12 months ahead.

Re-Entry Strategy

If history repeats itself, a great many now-mactive investors will not return to the market in an active way until after many of the biggest opportunities have been snapped up and largely dissipated.

To help you get started now with your re-entry strategy—and we urge you not to "get back in" at all unless you do so with your eyes wide open—we invite you to accept the following special invitation.

Special $46 Offer

We are an international finance and management group with Arab participation. Our parent company is a Societé Anonyme registered in Switzerland. Our subsidiaries are located in several European business centers. Our activities have expanded considerably during recent months. During 1975 we expect our business volume to pass the DM I billion mark.

We engage in the following major activities:

1. We plan, schedule, control, finance and/or invest in real estate, hotel and recreation as well as in industrial projects.

2. We consider and establish joint ventures (industry and service operations) in Anab countries on the basis of 50% participation by European partners. At the same time we wish to acquire a minority holding (up to 26%) of the European partner.

3. We invest and place Arab funds and we are in the process of establishing a banking group in Europe. 4. We deal in commodities such as petro-chemicals, fariffers, coment etc. and offer engineering services, turn-key plants, machinery and equipment.

In Ine with our rapid expansion we seek: Business Managers & Entrepreneurs with a proven successful business career in either banking, finance, marketing or in project management positions for planning, scheduling and controlling industrial and real estate projects in Europe and/or overseas. Excellent contacts to industry and commerce, with particular emphasis on the banking community and to professional associations would be essential.

We think that well-established professionals who still possess the drive and ambition to actively participate in the expansion of our group will qualify best.

We offer the responsibility for a certain business sector or to serve as a "free lencing consultant"

We have established stock option plans and welcome capital participation. Please arrange your initial contact with our consulting farm by forwarding a short currisulum vitae.

Your application will be kept strictly confidential until our consulting firm receives approval from you to proceed further. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. 6000 Frankfurt/Main Bleidenstrasse 6-10

THE SIXTEENTH ROUND From Number 1 Contender to No. 45472 By Rubin (Hurricane) Carter. Viking. 339 pp. Illustrated. $11.95.

ricane) Carter's "The Sixteenth Round" so peculiarly effective is that it delivers a sharp left hook to one's unexamined assumptions. For Rubin Carter does not seem the most likely candidate to be a black martyr to the American system of justice. To begin with, one recalls him from the mid-1960s with confused feelings. Because he affected a shaved head, a Fu Manchu mustache, and a baleful glare that made even Somny Liston seem benign by comparison, one that Mr. Carter was making capital of the white man's fantasy of the "bad nigger," and one felt pleased with one's sophisticated insight. But when one learned in May, 1967, that Mr. Carter had been convicted of murdering three white people in a bar in Paterson, New Jersey, one scarcely questioned the verdict: it simply followed that Mr. Carter was as evil as he looked. and that was the end of it. Moreover, Mr. Carter's prison autobiography is not especially an apologia pro vita sua. His eloquence doesn't compare with that of Eldridge Cleaver in "Soul on Ice" or George Jackson in "Sole-dad Brother." When he is not employing self-conscious phrases like "the destructive forces that rage within my soul," he tends to speak the language of the street hustler, using words not so much for the logical precision of their meaning as for the cumulative effect of their sounds, Sometimes he seems to wax so selfhypnotically dramatic that it is difficult to believe the climactic points of his flourishes—as, for instance, when he claims to have concluded a "dialogue" with Trenton State Prison's electric chair by actually urinating on the threatening object. (Where at that point was the warden who had relaxed prison rules by escorting Mr. Carter on this visit to the death house? one wonders.) Nor does Mr. Carter always project his character with the utmost clarity and candor. He adores his wife and child, he assures us, when it looks as though he is never going to live with them again and he is trying to dramatize the cruelty of his prison conviction; yet his affection is not so much in evidence when it doesn't suit his purposes, as for instance when he is listing as witnesses to his activities the people who helped him get free of his wife on the night when the triple murder happened to occur.

The white world was his enemy, he rages when it is rhetorically useful to his purposes; but on the other hand he had many white friends and supporters, he admits when he gets around to explaining details of his ring and prison careers. He was born to fight and destroy, he assures us while describing (in detail) the many boxing matches he won; but when it comes to those he lost, he either alibis that he was being mishandled, or doesn't bother to mention those bouts at guess what makes Rubin (Hur- wanted to destroy the world, at other times wanted the world to destroy him; who explains at great length the injustices that were visited upon him, but doesn't ever analyze the injustices he visited on others: and who ends his book with the somewhat empty-sounding plea that "Now the only chance I have is in appealing directly to you, the people, and showing you the wrongs that have to be righted—the injustice that has been done to me ..."as if we, "the people," could do for him what legal counsel and to do at his trial in 1967.

In other words, "The Sixteenth Round" is often the confused, angry cry of a man who sometimes

And yet, for all the apparent shortcomings of the man and his book, Mr. Carter makes a very strong case that he was framed for reasons of bigotry when he was convicted of that triple slaying. And not only does he make such a case in his book, but it seems to have been substantiated by a recent report in The New York Times that Mr. Carter's two principal accusers had admitted to "deliberately and wrongly identifying him and another man as the slayers. Which makes one realize, as one looks back at "The Sixteenth Round" that it doesn't much matter whether boxing fans like me took Mr. Carter's "evil" ring image to be real or not. It doesn't really count whether his book is consistent, articulate, candid, and full of insights or not. It needn't concern us how Rubin Carter compares with writers like Eldridge Cleaver and George Jackson. Images don't count. You can appear to be a bad guy and write a mediocre book and still be dead right about the evils of the system. And that makes "The Sixteenth Round' seem very eloquent after all.

Possible Link Between Pill, Tumors Suggested MIAMI BEACH, Oct. 25 (AP-

DJ).—A team of surgeons has discovered mysterious but usually benign growths on the livers of women; the only common denominator they can find among the women is that they were taking birth control pills.

Surgeons from the University of Kentucky reported-here on 11 women in whom they have discovered the rare liver growths. In six of the women the liver had hemorrhaged. Bleeding in the abdominal cavity required emergency surgery. One woman died. The women ranged in age between 22 years and 47 years and had been taking oral contraceptives from six months to nine years.

"We haven't proven the role of the oral contraceptive (in these liver tumors), but since this was the only significant medication most of these women were taking, a possibility of a link is increasing every day," Dr. E. Truman Mays, professor of surgery at the University of Kentucky, told reporters before delivering a report on the liver growths to the American College of Surgeons meeting here.

WASHINGTON.—As everyone chip-eating red-blooded American football fans with the voice in the foreiront of the fight for women's liberation. My body is scarred from battling on the picket lines at the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City and the Miss Universe Contest in Miami, As we say in the lib movement, "I've paid my dues."

Therefore, I believe I can deal with the following subject with complete objectivity. What on God's green Astroturf is a woman doing acting as a sports commentator during professional football game? Last week I turned on the Buchwald Redskin - Giant game, leaned back in my chair with a beer in my hand and a bowl of potato chips at my feet. Suddenly I heard this strange voice on the air. It sounded exactly like a woman's. My first thought was that CBS's Pat Summerall had had a serious operation. Then I decided that the sound on my set had gone awry. But a few seconds later a very pretty brunette came on the screen who was introduced as Jane Chastain, and Summerall said she was going to do the color for the game.

I sat straight up in my seat. woman doing color on TV? Didn't CBS have any shame at

Protesters in Paris Disrupt Abortion Film

PARIS, Oct. 25 (Reuters).— Demonstrators last night attacked two Paris theaters showing a film which includes a real abortion scene.

About a dozen protesters belonging to an anti-abortion group interrupted the showing of the film, 'Histoire d'A," breaking windows in one theater and throwing a tear-gas grenade in the other, police said. The film was banned last year, but its showing was recently approved by the government.

of a girl?

Let us make no mistake about this. Football watching is the last refuge of the male chauvinist pig. We invented the game, we play it every Sunday and Monday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday and Saturday (see your local paper for TV listings). It is our thing.

As nice as Ms. Chastain looks and as knowledgeable as she tried to be, she has no more business on a TV football game than Howard Cosell has on "The Waltons."

If I were to conjecture why CBS made this decision, I would have to guess that by assigning a woman announcer to a TV football game they were trying to attract a larger female audience. They were hoping to win over the wives or, as they are called, "widows" of the men who spend their weekends staring dumbly at their tubes.

This thinking is not the way we do things in America. The role of the wife on Sunday afternoons is to make the beds, prepare the meals, drive the children somewhere or take care of any relatives who might drop in unex-

Even if they wanted to, they don't have time to watch football It is a cruel hoax on the part of the network to try to attract them to the TV screen when it knows women have so many more important things to do.

To show you the groveling they did last Sunday, CBS had Ms. Chastain interview Billie Jean King at halftime. The last thing American men want to see during a football halftime is an interview with Billie Jean King.

Let me make myself perfectly clear. I have no objection to women being airline pilots, truck drivers, senators and even president of the United States. They're entitled.

They can be doctors, lawyers, automobile mechanics, policemen, firemen and Indian chiefs. They can own banks, be in the numbers rackets and play Little League baseball if they want to. The only place they don't belong is on a TV sportscast telling us male spectators things that they think we didn't know about football.

Cookies and 'Kiss Me, Kate'

PARIS (DRT).—Bella Spewack, who invented Girl Scout cookies and wrote " Kiss Me, Kate," breezed through Paris recently on her way home to New York after having seen yet another production of "Kate," this time in Malmö, Sweden.

"They treated it like a revue. They threw away the book," says Mrs. Spewack, who wrote the book with her husband, Sam, to Cole Porter's music and lyrics. What she liked best in Malmö was her hotel room. "They had a fixture, sort of carbuncly, that heats the room and lights what you're reading at the same time."

The only survivor of "Kate's" authors, Mrs. Spewack is thy and white-haired now, but still felsty and a mile-a-minute talker. She was sporting a tan beret that she had sold to herself in London's Selfridge's, the saleslady being otherwise occupied, and she carried a white plastic bag into which she would on occasion plunge to bring up such treasures as a postcard of the statue of the man who first brought the potato to Sweden, addresses of doctors including two sisters who are dentists and dermatologists, which could save a lot of time if one were doubly afflicted, and a photograph of her husband, who died in 1971.

"It isn't given to everyone to have 50 years," Mrs. Spewack says. "We were too young. He came too early and I stayed too late."

On this trip Mrs. Spewack has met several new people, including: An Egyptian who offered her a Mars bar on the London-Paris flight; a Paris cop who winked; two engineers from Poland who were off to build a tanker in Norway and whose check she cashed for fear they'd starve; the Swedish lady who showed her the potato bringer's statue and whom she met while trying to buy her present beret's predecessor in Göteborg ("It seemed I had known you always and it was quite sad when all the intense life that were you vanished in the air," he Swedish lady wrote Mrs. Spewack after she'd gone); and while having tea in Shepherd's Market in London she met a man who said, A penny for your thoughts. I've been cut up in all directions, I hate surgeons, Mrs. Spewack replied. I don't blame you, said the man, producing a calling card, which listed him as a fellow of most known surgical societies, so Mrs. Spewack and he went off and had some drinks. (She drinks sherry and smokes Tom Thumbs.)

"He's moving to Costa Rica. He says because they have no army they'll have no revolution," Mrs. Spewack says. "I said you can also meet Vesco, you might even meet Nixon."

Mrs. Spewack and her husband were one of Broadway's top writing teams, most famous for "Boy Meets Girl" ("The lucky part in that one was the manicurist—all the girls who played that part married millionaires," she says). They also wrote for Hollywood ("My Favorite Wife," with Irene Dunne, was their favorite) and they wrote one Broadway drama, "Spring Song."

"When people came out of the theater in tears. I would say. don't cry, it's only a play," says Bella. The Spewacks stuck to comedy

"Kiss Me, Kate," the most divine of musicals, came of course from Shakespeare's worst play, "The Taming of the Shrew." Both Spewacks and Cole Porter hated the idea. By the time they had their first run-through in Philadelphia, Mrs. Spewack was jubilant. "It was great! I just got up and said, It's wonderful. The boys said, Shihh. Cole was angry because you shouldn't say it's wonderful before

It was wonderful, of course, and in 26 years it has been seen from Japan to Argentina. Mrs. Spewack especially admired the Viennese production, where management used real silks and velvets and hiked ticket prices. The favorite song everywhere is "Brush Up Your Shakespeare." Trieste was socko and the Harvard production so innovative that Mrs. Spewack fell all about laughing:

"I told the conductor he was wonderful and had a great future. He said, I don't want to be a conductor, I want to be a doctor. I dropped him at once." Mrs. Spewack hated Peter Coe's London production: "In London

anyone whose name is Peter can direct." France, to its disgrace, is almost the only country where "Kate" has mover been seen. "I had a whole megiliah with Louise de Vilmorin," she said. "Then I met Jean-Louis Barrault. We met with Madeleine and I said, why don't you do 'Kate'? She said there's no part for me. In France everyone shakes hands and nothing happens.

Mrs. Spewack is writing a book called "Travels with Kate Including Scandinavia." She turned down an offer to write about her stormy marriage but a publisher who bought her an expensive lunch-"that shows they're serious" -has persuaded her to write something called Why I Write Comedy.'

"It's the story of my childhood," said Mrs. Spewack, "You'll cry your eyes out.

"I wrote under five names. One was Bella Cohen, the name my mother gave me. There was no father. As a book reviewer, I was Bellacy; I thought that sounded good. Paul Poiret wanted me to go back to Paris with him. Me, the worst dressed woman in New York and still the worst dressed woman in the world."

She turned down a chance to edit a woman's page-"I resented t, women can read the whole paper"—and became a press agent since newspaperwomen were so badly paid. It was at this point that she invented Girl Scout cookies. Before that, she had waited on table, taught English to foreigners and tutored girls in Latin.
"I was lucky," she says. "It's been a good life. It could have en better. As a waitress I was no good." She met Sam Spewack at a Socialist rally, Judy Holliday's father introduced them, "Sam was 19. He was all in black—I didn't know they were his father's clothes. Black suit, black umbrella, black hat.

I thought he was a detective. I hated him on sight."

Before "Kate," the Spewacks had collaborated with Cole Porter "Leave It to Me" (1938), in which Mary Martin sang "My Heart Belongs to Daddy." It was written for the Gazton-Moore comedy team at the urging of Billy Gaxton, who was on an ocean liner with the Spewacks and his stately blonds wife, Madeleine Cameron.

"It was in the days when France still had ships. Billy Gaxton told me his wife was the first in the Ziegfeld Follies to walk across the stage carrying a handbag. I mulled that over. He said what about a musical? Sam reacted as if he couldn't hear. I said, we'll pick

On the same crossing was Edna Ferber, who accused Mrs. Spewack of cheating at shuffleboard some years later when they met walking around New York's reservoir, and a man who was so scared he'd been cited in the notorious Mary Astor diaries that he cut his face open dashing to be the first to get the newspapers that were dropped on board. "He had a terrible gash and he wasn't even mentioned," she says. "Those were the happy days. The market was up and everyone was young."

Once back in New York Mrs. Spewack will check on a Broadway revival of "Kate" and get some more berets at Lamston's, where they cost only half as much as at Selfridge's. "This is the only one I have," she said, pulling at it flercely, "and no one's getting it.". A pause. "Do you want it?" she said.
